

March Goes Out Like a Lamb as The Dallas Jewish Community Foundation Recognizes Donors

Although the weather looked threatening, the last day of March 2008 ended up sunny and pleasant. The Zale Auditorium at the J was transformed by elegant table settings and a sumptuous kosher buffet. With nearly 150 people in attendance, the Dallas Jewish Community Foundation honored people who have made a commitment to keep the future of our community bright.

Donald H. Schaffer, Chairperson of the Foundation's Board of Trustees, thanked the honorees who have created endowments and bequests that will ensure Jewish continuity. The Dallas Jewish Community Foundation is intensifying its work to assist Jewish nonprofits in building secure financial futures for their respective organizations. In the coming months, this new campaign, called Create a Jewish Legacy, will provide training and customized assistance to spur all nonprofit Jewish organizations to excel in the important work of creating endowments and bequests.

The keynote speaker, Morton H. Meyerson, presented a heart-felt reflection on Tzedakah. His parents were present at the event as he related learning about the importance of giving back and then passing this tradition down to his children and grandchildren. Mr. Meyerson also shared fresh insights about left and right-brained thinking and its connection to philanthropy.

Donald H. Schaffer, Michelle Tycher Stein and Scott Miller

Robert and Shirley Zlotkey

Beverly and Cary Rossel, Carol Aaron and Bradley Rossel

Morton H. Meyerson

Bruce Chemel, Mitzi Kahn and Michael Fleisher

Steven and Ruthy Rosenberg